

Asian and Middle Eastern Studies Papers available for the Honour School of Religion and Asian and Middle Eastern Studies

For students commencing in MT23 for examination in 2025.

Examination Regulations require candidates “to offer eight papers. Three papers must be in Religion and three in Asian and Middle Eastern Studies; the other two may be in either Religion or Asian and Middle Eastern Studies. All candidates will be required to submit as one of their eight papers either a thesis (in Religion) or a dissertation (in Asian and Middle Eastern Studies).”

For Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, candidates specialising in Hinduism (with Sanskrit) must offer papers from the approved lists below.

Hinduism with Sanskrit

The official syllabus descriptions for individual papers are provided in the Bachelor of Arts in Sanskrit Handbook.

All candidates must offer the following papers:

Sanskrit Texts I OR Advanced Sanskrit Texts I

Sanskrit Texts II OR Advanced Sanskrit Texts II

Essay questions on classical Indian literature, history and culture

Additionally candidates may offer ONE or TWO papers selected from the list below, providing that the total number of AMES papers offered does not exceed five, including the AMES dissertation (if offered).

Brāhmaṇism (Sanskrit)

Vaiṣṇavism (Sanskrit)

Śaivism (Sanskrit)

Ancient Indian Linguistics

Sanskrit Chosen Area

Special Subject

The availability and approval of options under Sanskrit Chosen Area and Special Subject are confirmed annually. Students should consult their Sanskrit tutor at the Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies to discuss possible permissible options, which will be reviewed by the Joint Committee of the Faculties of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, and Theology and Religion in Michaelmas Term 2024, when this statement may be reissued.

With the exception of the Special Subject, teaching for the optional papers will take place during Michaelmas and Hilary Terms of a student’s final year and will consist of weekly reading classes in the chosen language and ca. 6 essays with accompanying tutorials. (For Ancient Indian Linguistics, lectures are also scheduled in Michaelmas Term of the final year.) The method of examination will be one three-hour in person paper containing a combination of texts for translation into English and essay questions on the topics covered in the tutorials.

The Special Subject will be taught in the Michaelmas and Hilary Terms of a student's final year, but primarily through tutorials and examined by one three-hour essay paper or, subject to the approval of the Joint Committee of the Faculties of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, and Theology and Religion, a second dissertation. In the case of the latter, students will receive regular supervision from an appropriate faculty member to discuss a suitable topic, research methods and bibliography. Not all options may be available each year.

The Asian and Middle Eastern Studies dissertation

Candidates may (and if not offering the Theology and Religion Thesis, candidates must) offer an AMES dissertation as a fourth or fifth AMES paper.

Candidates choosing an AMES dissertation (rather than a Theology and Religion thesis) will be subject to the same structure and deadlines as other Sanskrit students within the Faculty. More information on the dissertation is available in the BA Sanskrit handbook.

Prerequisites and restrictions

The offering of individual papers is subject to the restrictions and prerequisites pertaining to those papers in the Bachelor of Arts in Sanskrit Handbook.

The offering of individual papers from the Faculty of Theology and Religion is subject to the restrictions and prerequisites pertaining to those papers.

Any students or college tutors concerned about the suitability of a particular paper or paper combination are welcome to approach the Sanskrit course coordinator for advice.

Weighting in Assessment

All papers, including the AMES dissertation, are equally weighted as one of eight Honour School papers. The delivery and assessment of each option is outlined in the individual paper descriptions.
