POST GRADUATE DIPLOMA IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

The individual paper descriptions amplify, where appropriate, what is in the Examination Regulations for your course. The aims and objectives of the paper define the skills, knowledge and competencies that you should have acquired through its completion. The delivery is a summary of how the paper is taught. The lecture, class and tutorial descriptions are indicative and may vary from what is listed, in terms of timing, number and content. Specimen examination papers, book lists, notices, forms and other useful resources for each paper listed as available can be found on Canvas. Booklists are available on ORLO.

The details, including set texts for some papers may alter from year to year. The set texts for the 2024 examination of 2### papers (for the first year of FHS) have been confirmed and are specified in this document. However, please note that information for the 2024 examination of 3### papers is yet to be confirmed and details specified for 3### papers in this document are, therefore, not yet binding on the 2024 examination. This Schedule of Papers will be reissued with confirmed 3### paper details including set texts in Hilary 2024.
This is version 5 of the Theology and Religion Schedule of Papers for FHS and PG Dip for examination in 2024.

Summary of changes in version 5

Paper 3310 Varieties of Judaism 100 BCE – 100 CE has been added to this Schedule and will be taught in 2023-24 for examination in 2024. (The same paper has, therefore, been removed from the list of unavailable papers.)

Summary of changes in version 4

The following papers will not run in 2023-24 for examination in 2024 and have been removed and the list of unavailable papers:

- 3208 Origen
- 3211 Aquinas
- 3212 Luther
- 3221 Cone

Summary of changes in version 3

The list of papers unavailable for examination in 2024 has been updated.

The following paper descriptions have been added:

- 3208 Origen
- 3212 Luther
- 3303 Faith Reason and Religion from the Enlightenment to the Romantic Age

The following paper descriptions have been removed:

- 3302 Saints and Sanctity in the Age of Bede
- 3304 Eastern Christianities from Constantinople to Baghdad
- 3402 Psychology of Religion

The recommended pattern of teaching for Paper 3102 Paul and the Pauline Tradition has been updated, moving the lectures from Hilary Term 2024 to Michaelmas Term 2023.

The recommended pattern of teaching for Paper 3111 Why the environment, women, colonialization, and Black lives matter to New Testament interpretation has been updated, moving the classes from Michaelmas
Term 2023 to Hilary Term 2024. The deadline for the Assessment of has been revised for 2023-2024 as follows:

An essay, which should not exceed 2,500 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography, submitted no later than noon on Friday of week 3 of Trinity Monday of Week 9 of Hilary Term in the final year of the Honour School.

The following note has been added under ‘Assessment’ to Papers 3111 and 3112:

The title of this paper in Examination Regulations is ['The Afterlife of the New Testament' / 'The Old Testament in Early Christianity'] – select this option when making your official examination entries.

Paper 3203 (formerly Analytical Philosophy and Christian Theology) has been renamed ‘Philosophical Theology’ and the Description and Aims updated as follows:

 [...] For this paper, students will draw on the methods of contemporary analytic philosophy to assess the meaning, coherence, and truth of key Christian doctrines and practices. No background in analytic any specific method of philosophy is required, and students will also have an opportunity to consider whether analytic philosophy really is useful for theological reflection, though successful student work should display careful, structured, logical reasoning and transparent arguments, as well as careful attention to the development of doctrine and the resources of the Christian tradition.

“Analytic” philosophy is a style of philosophy that prizes structured, logical reasoning and transparent arguments. It is sometimes distinguished from “continental” French and German philosophical traditions like phenomenology or deconstruction. Successful work will demonstrate familiarity with the tools and methods of contemporary analytic philosophy, as well as careful attention to the development of doctrine and the resources of the Christian tradition.

Aims

To enable students, many of whom will not have had prior exposure to analytic Christian philosophical theology, to reflect critically on main areas of Christian theology using some concepts and techniques of analytic contemporary philosophy.

Also, the following note has been added under ‘Assessment’:

Past papers on OXAM are titled ‘Analytic Philosophy and Christian Theology’.

Summary of changes in version 2

The recommended pattern of teaching has been updated for 2### papers in 2022-23 as follows:

2202 History of Doctrine lectures – 8 in each of Hilary and Trinity Term (not MT/HT).

2304 Formation of Rabbinic Judaism – 8 in Trinity Term (not MT), and consequently the following advice has been withdrawn:

It is recommended that students attend lectures in Michaelmas Term before commencing tutorials for this paper.

The following note has been added to the Set Texts section of 2101 Narrative World of the Hebrew Bible and 2102 Poetic World of the Hebrew Bible:

...Examination gobbets will come from these chapters, [...]

3
Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Hebrew text used will be from the Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS), Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 1967/77.

The following note has been added to the Set Texts section of 2103 The Gospels and 3102 Paul and the Pauline Tradition:

Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Greek text used will be from the Novum Testamentum Graece (Nestle-Aland), 28th Edition; Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 2012.

The following note has been added to the Set Texts section of 3101 Hebrew of the Hebrew Bible:

The Hebrew text used will be from the Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS), Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 1967/77.

PAPERS IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE FINAL HONOUR SCHOOL

2101 THE NARRATIVE WORLD OF THE HEBREW BIBLE

Description

This second-year paper explores the rich and diverse world of biblical narrative, particularly in light of various methods of approaching narrative, coping with divergent sources behind narratives, investigating the often loaded way in which language and quotations are used in narratives, exploring aspects of cultural borrowing within narratives, and look at multiple narratives in multiple genres within the exilic and post-exilic periods.

Set Texts

These focus on the stories of primeval times that were seen as shaping the world (Genesis 1–11) and on the accounts of the last days of the kingdom of Judah (2 Kings 24–25; 2 Chronicles 36) and there will also be an opportunity to comment on the Hebrew text of Genesis 6-8.

Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Hebrew text used will be from the Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS), Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 1967/77.

Aims

To develop and refine students understanding of the various ways in which narratives operate in terms of sources, editing, and cultural borrowing and to equip students with a range of heuristic lenses through which to understand and contextualise biblical texts.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have developed a refined, critical awareness of the numerous ways in which biblical narrative can be contextualised.
- Have developed a deep knowledge of the history of the exilic and post-exilic periods through examining primary biblical and non-biblical material.
- Understand the pertinent critical issues currently debated among scholars concerning each of the texts and periods specified.
- Be able to write intelligently on the selected texts and topics in dialogue with both primary material and scholars.

Delivery

8 Lectures; 4 Classes; 8 Tutorials

Students should attend 8 lectures on Narrative World of the Hebrew Bible in Michaelmas Term. Students are also expected to attend 4 classes in Hilary Term. Each of these classes will require no more than one hour of preparation and will focus on the set texts in English (for example, comparing the set chapters from Kings and Chronicles with two commentaries; comparing the flood accounts in Genesis with other comparative flood narratives), prominent secondary material, and wider metacritical issues relating to scholarship in the area.

Students who have not taken paper 1101 Introduction to the Study of the Bible for the Preliminary Examination are encouraged to attend the Introduction to the Hebrew Bible lectures in Michaelmas Term.
Students intending to study the set text Genesis 6-8 in Hebrew are encouraged to attend the Intermediate Hebrew classes offered by the Faculty, which will cover the Hebrew set texts for paper 2101 and 2102.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2102 THE POETIC WORLD OF THE HEBREW BIBLE

Description

This paper investigates the poetic traditions of the Old Testament, including prophetic, liturgical, and wisdom literature. Consideration is given to such topics as the nature of Hebrew poetry, prophecy and particular prophets, psalmody and the Psalms, wisdom and the wise, laments and love poetry, and the relation of these writings to ancient Near Eastern culture.

Set Texts

The textual focus is on the Book Four of the Psalter (Psalms 90-106) and the poems/songs of ‘Second Isaiah’ (Isaiah 40–55) and there will also be an opportunity to comment on the Hebrew text of Psalms 93-99.

Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Hebrew text used will be from the Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS), Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 1967/77.

Aims

To enable students to acquire a knowledge of the poetic traditions in the Old Testament, and to develop critical understanding by introducing them to basic issues of method, with particular reference to the study of two major Old Testament texts.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have gained knowledge about and understanding of the poetic traditions within the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament;
- Have gained a close knowledge of two particular poetic texts set for special study in English, with the option of having studied a section of one of these in Hebrew;
- Have explored the possible historical, literary and theological backgrounds to these writings and the trajectories of interpretation to which they gave rise.

Delivery

8 Lectures; 4 Classes; 8 Tutorials

Students should attend 8 lectures on Poetic World of the Hebrew Bible in Hilary Term. Students are also expected to attend 4 classes in Trinity Term. Each of these classes will require no more than one hour of preparation.

Students who have not taken paper 1101 Introduction to the Study of the Bible for the Preliminary Examination are encouraged to attend the Introduction to the Hebrew Bible lectures in Michaelmas Term.

Students intending to study the set text Ps 93-99 in Hebrew are encouraged to attend the Intermediate Hebrew classes offered by the Faculty, which will cover the Hebrew set texts for paper 2101 and 2102.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2024 Version 5 – 01.06.2023

2103 THE GOSPELS

Description

The Gospels paper will introduce students to foundational understanding of the Gospels of Matthew and John as exemplifying early Christianity’s two most influential normative expressions of the Jesus tradition. While offering an introduction to the backgrounds and origins of the gospels, and to leading scholarly theories about literary relationships between them, the primary aim will be to develop familiarity with the historical, critical, theological and interpretative issues raised by the Gospels of Matthew and John in their canonical form. Teaching for this paper will also aim at least selectively to illustrate the gospels’ place within the wider biblical context, and to show how their exegesis and/or reception bears on issues of Christian history, doctrine, and relations with other religious traditions.

Set Texts

(in English and/or Greek):

Matthew 2-3, 5-9, 17, 26-28

John 1, 5-6, 8, 11, 17, 19-20

Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Greek text used will be from the Novum Testamentum Graece (Nestle-Aland), 28th Edition; Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 2012.

Aims

The paper aims to provide foundational understanding of the Gospels of Matthew and John as exemplifying early Christianity’s two most influential normative expressions of the Jesus tradition. The primary aim will be to develop familiarity with the Gospels of Matthew and John in their canonical form and setting.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have gained a close familiarity with the text and meaning of the Gospels of Matthew and John;
- Be able to give an account of their historical origin and setting;
- Have a thorough grasp of the main historical, critical and theological issues raised by these texts;
- Be able to exegete and comment on particular texts assigned for special study, and to illustrate how selected passages bear on matters of ancient and/or contemporary interpretation.

Delivery

16 lectures; 8 tutorials.

The 8 lectures on each of Matthew and John provide a general framework for understanding. Each series of 8 lectures will include two lectures focussing on the set chapters for each Gospel. Lectures will assume study of the text in English, although some reference may be made to the Greek text.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

Christianity is a practical religion, but most Christians hold that it cannot be practised alone. Christian life is grounded in the faith and worship of distinct communities, or churches, and, since faith and worship both presuppose belief, these churches (or denominations) are typically distinguished by their doctrines. Some of these are held in common with other Christians, while others are peculiar to one or a few denominations; in either case they are usually presented as deductions from texts which are universally recognised as scriptures. The language in which they are formulated, however, is often technical, and it is not uncommon for particular creeds or articles to be expressed with a minuteness and complexity that puzzles even insiders. Historical study is generally the best way of ascertaining what believers have understood, and why they differ, regarding such terms as revelation, creatio ex nihilo, Trinitarianism, incarnation, atonement, sacrament, ecclesiology and eschatology.

This paper is designed to introduce students to the history of such terms, and thus to explain the genesis of the doctrines to which they refer. Candidates will be expected to know the biblical evidence which has supported and informed the promulgation of these doctrines; they will also be expected to show an appreciation of contingent factors, both intellectual and historical, which have shaped the oecumenical formulations of Christian doctrine and have led to the emergence of distinct communities, churches or traditions.

Aims

Candidates who have attended 16 lectures on this subject, and prepared thoroughly for tutorials, may be expected to have a good understanding:

- Of the role of doctrine in Christian life and in the ministry of the churches;
- Of the relation between exegesis and doctrine, and of the endemic causes of dispute about the meaning of the scriptures;
- Of the history which lies behind the formulation of particular doctrines, and the historical circumstances which have promoted either consensus or division.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will be familiar with:

- the scriptural passages which have served as recognised touchstones of debate and speculation among theologians;
- the oecumenical creeds and the distinctive tenets of major denominations;
- the principal controversies that have shaped the development or diversification of Christian thought on particular doctrines;
- the teachings of the major theologians where these are relevant to the study and discussion of particular doctrines.

Delivery

16 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

This paper is designed to introduce students to Christian ethics—its concepts, its variety, its history, its major figures, some of its classic texts and its practical significance.

Aims

The aim of the Christian Moral Reasoning paper is to develop a capacity for moral reasoning, specifically in terms of the Christian moral tradition. Candidates are invited to criticize what they find in this tradition, but they are advised to do so only after they have first acquired a sound understanding of it. Candidates are, of course, always free to advance their own convictions.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will be able to demonstrate understanding of:

- Principal concepts and methodological issues in Christian moral thought
- Concrete issues in the light of Christian moral concepts and in relation to Christian moral sources
- How to marshal material from the Hebrew bible, the New Testament, classic texts and other relevant sources in support of an argument
- In the course of demonstrating the above, the course also aims to enable candidates, secondarily, to demonstrate some understanding of:
  - The moral thought of relevant major figures in the history of Christian ethics—e.g., Augustine, Aquinas, Luther, Calvin, Kierkegaard, Bonhoeffer, Barth
  - The variety of Christian traditions of ethics—e.g., Thomist, Lutheran, Calvinist, Anglican, Catholic, Anabaptist
  - The relation of Christian moral thinking to major schools of moral philosophy (e.g., those of Aristotle, Kant, and Utilitarianism) and to current intellectual trends (e.g., political liberalism, feminism, postmodernism, human rights discourse)
  - The practical significance of Christian moral thinking to present-day debates, controversies and issues around the world

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 classes; 8 tutorials.

The course aims to cover a large amount of theoretical, practical, and historical territory. Candidates will be prepared for the examination paper by 4 tutorials on methodological issues and concepts such as love, natural and revealed law, the supreme good, divine command, freedom, conscience, virtues, justification, faith and grace; and 4 tutorials on concrete moral issues in sexual ethics, healthcare ethics and political ethics.

These tutorials will be supported by a series of 8 introductory lectures on “A Christian Vision of Moral Life”, and by 8 classes on concrete moral issues concerning sexual ethics, healthcare ethics and political ethics the following term.
Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

The examination paper will consist of four sections: 1. Christian Moral Concepts and Methods; 2. Sexual ethics; 3. Healthcare ethics; 4. Political Ethics. Candidates will be required to answer three questions, of which at least one question must be answered from section 1, and at least one from another section.

In answering questions, candidates are encouraged to show an intelligent and critical grasp of relevant classic texts, including papal encyclicals and those by such authors as Augustine, Aquinas, Luther, Calvin, Kant, Kierkegaard, Bonhoeffer and Barth.
2024 Version 5 – 01.06.2023

2203 THEMES IN 19TH-CENTURY THEOLOGY & RELIGION

Description

The paper addresses key themes in theological thinking and the study of religion in Europe and North America during the long nineteenth century. These include Biblical interpretation, the nature of authority, faith and reason, ecclesiology, Christology, romanticism, literature and imagination, spirit and history, secularization, reductionism, religious experience, and the encounter with world religions and the natural sciences. The topics will be addressed through seminal or representative texts. Kant, Hegel, Schleiermacher, Kierkegaard, Nietzsche, Newman and Coleridge are especially significant thinkers whose work or influence will normally be represented. Four main topics with prescribed texts will be published for each year. Students are not expected to become familiar with all of these texts, but, in consultation with tutors, will focus on two or three of the prescribed texts as well as preparing one or more essays on more general issues.

Themes and Set Texts

The themes and texts specified for study in 2022-23 and examination in 2024 are as follows:

1) Spirit and History

2) Reductionism

3) Religious Experience

4) Literature and Religion

Fyodor Dostoevsky, The Brothers Karamazov [1881], trans. By Richard Pevear and Larissa Volokhonsky (New York: Vintage, 1992): “Rebellion” (Book V, chapter 4); “The Grand Inquisitor” (Book V, chapter 5); and “The Russian Monk” (Book 6)

Aims

- To build on the student’s knowledge of theology and the history of religion
- To understand some of the key intellectual developments in the long nineteenth century that have proved significant for the history of Christianity, the emergence of the academic study of religion, and for modern society more generally
- To analyse and evaluate the relative merits and deficiencies of arguments concerning theology and religion as considered under various thematic rubrics
- To become familiar with the reception history of such arguments through engagement with substantive secondary resources

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A good knowledge of some of the most influential and representative texts and thinkers of the period
- The ability to contextualize representative texts and thinkers with respect to the larger religious, social, and political movements of the period
- Skills important for the historical study of religion generally, and for the history of Christianity and historical theology specifically, by assessing different sorts of historical materials, and by analysing the broader context of the period

The capacity to think theologically, holding in view classic texts from the tradition

Delivery

16 lectures; 8 tutorials

The lectures offer thematic coverage and historical contextualization of the complex intellectual developments in theology and religion across the period; the tutorials enable students to explore and interrogate these themes in greater depth through supervised personal engagement with primary and secondary literature.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

The examination paper is split into two parts. One part requires comment on the set texts and the other offers more general questions. Students will be required to answer 3 questions.
2024 Version 5 – 01.06.2023

2204 KEY THEMES IN SYSTEMATIC THEOLOGY

GOD, CREATION, CHRIST, AND CHURCH

Description

It will develop the student’s knowledge in and understanding of, four key areas of Christian doctrine introducing sources, fundamental ideas, methods, controversies and major historical as well as contemporary positions:

1. The Triune God
2. Creation and Anthropology
3. Christology and Soteriology
4. Pneumatology and the Church.

The paper will also explore their interrelatedness and thereby introduce students to the ordering and arrangement of the key doctrines in theological systems or summae, the reason for such an ordering, and its theological implications. In this way, students will learn the craft of theological thinking.

Aims

- To deepen students’ knowledge and understanding of main elements of Christian doctrine.
- To develop the engage students’ awareness of the systematic interrelationship between the key doctrines.
- To engage students with classic as well as contemporary expositions of key doctrines.
- To develop the student’s awareness of doctrinal debate and controversy including disagreements between the historic churches.
- To develop the student’s ability to think theologically and critically about doctrine.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A good knowledge and understanding of systematic theology.
- Developed an ability to think theologically with an awareness of the theological implications across a system for a particular emphasis and interpretation of one key doctrine.
- An awareness of different theological traditions, their commonalities and disagreements.
- Knowledge of and ability to engage with, important theological texts regarding the four doctrinal loci.
Delivery and Prescribed Texts

16 lectures; 8 classes; 8 tutorials.

The 16 lectures introduce students to each of the four doctrinal loci within their historical, confessional, and systematic contexts. They will map out for the candidates how these doctrines have been articulated, what their conceptual potential and challenges are and how they relate systematically to one another. Attention will be drawn to where theological incoherencies can occur. The broad sweep of the lecture course will enable students to contextualise the in-depth analyses of specific texts to be covered in classes.

In the eight classes a number of prescribed texts will be examined in more depth. Through their study, students will gain an understanding of how modern theologians have approached the various doctrinal topics, how they have worked with their traditions and how they have incorporated contemporary insights and concerns.

The written exam will be based both on the broader issues introduced in the lectures and the more specific approaches encountered in the prescribed texts.

While candidates will not be expected to refer to all or to any particular one of the prescribed texts in their examination essays, they should show familiarity with one or more of them. The best examination scripts will display secure knowledge and critical engagement with a select range of these texts. In each year, the examination will provide scope and opportunity for a range of these prescribed texts to be engaged but it may not be possible to refer to every text, every year. Students are therefore advised to prepare multiple texts from across the doctrinal loci. Please note that as distinct from so-called ‘set texts’ in other papers, the examination will not include gobbets and candidates will not be required to offer explicit commentary on selected portions of text.

The following texts will be prescribed for examination in 2024:

1. Trinity:

Week Two: John Zizioulas, Being as Communion (New York: St Vladimir’s Seminary Press, 1997), 27-65.

2. Creation and Anthropology

3. Christ and Salvation:

Week Six: Kathryn Tanner: Christ the Key (Cambridge: CUP, 2010), 247-73.

4. Pneumatology and Church:

Week Seven: Lumen Gentium and Gaudium et Spes. Available online at: http://www.vatican.va/archive/hist_councils/ii_vatican_council/documents/vat-ii_const_19641121_lumen-gentium_en.html and

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

The exam paper will be divided into four parts according to the four doctrinal loci. Candidates will be asked to answer three questions from two different parts.
2301 HISTORY AND THEOLOGY OF THE EARLY CHURCH (64-337 A.D.)

Description

Students taking this paper will be able to observe the evolution of Christianity from a community of disciples to an organized Church which spanned the whole of the Mediterranean world. For convenience, the term "Church" in the present rubric embraces all professing Christians in the period from 64 to 337 A.D. though it is expected that students will become aware of the difficulties which attend the use of this term.

Part A consists of the history of the Church as an institution, and of its relations to the Roman Empire, from the death of St Paul (c. 64 A.D.) to the death of Constantine in 337 A.D. Questions will be set on some but not necessarily all of the following: the growth of the church and the meaning of conversion; the relation of Christianity to Judaism; the diversity of early Christian communities; the causes, scope and effects of persecution; patterns of Christian ministry (including the origins of the threefold hierarchy and of the title Papa or Pope); ecclesiastical discipline and the beginnings of monasticism; schisms caused by Judaizers, Gnostics, Montanists, Novatianists and Donatists; the development of orthodoxy and synodical government; the evolution of the biblical canon; the role of Christianity in the Constantinian Empire.

Part B consists of the speculative and dogmatic theologies of this period. Questions will be set on some, but not necessarily all, of the following: Ignatius of Antioch; the Gnostic understanding of creation and redemption; Justin Martyr; Athenagoras; Theophilus of Antioch; Irenaeus of Lyons; Tertullian of Carthage; Clement of Alexandria; Hippolytus of Rome; Origen; Cyprian of Carthage; Novatian; Dionysius of Alexandria; Eusebius of Caesarea; Lactantius; Arius; the Nicene Creed; Athanasius of Alexandria. Candidates will be expected to show some knowledge of a theologian’s intellectual background and the historical conditions which prompted and shaped his activity as a theologian.

Aims

- To communicate knowledge of the formative period of Christian history;
- To impart to students an understanding of historiographic method;
- To promote reflection on the relation between history and doctrine.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A clear outline narrative of events in the history of the church up to the death of Constantine;
- Pertinent knowledge of the history of the Roman empire during this period;
- Mastered principles of causal explanation in both political and intellectual history;
- Reflected on the teaching of at least one major theologian and on the genesis of his opinions.

Delivery

8 Lectures; 8 Classes; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

This paper aims to introduce students to a number of major topics concerning the institutions, thought and practice of medieval Christianity as it interacted with Judaism and Islam. The course will study Christianity (including its confrontation with Paganism) in the framework of its encounters with Judaism and Islam in the medieval West. Students will be encouraged to explore areas of similarity in the thought of the three Abrahamic religions, while recognising the distinctiveness of each. They will study key medieval Christian, Jewish, and Muslim thinkers such as Thomas Aquinas, Maimonides (Moses ben Maimon), and Averroes (Ibn Rushd). In considering how the adherents of different religions identified themselves, they will address the extent to which religious intolerance and persecution related in medieval societies to fear of ‘the other’. Treatment of the religions will interlock in order to demonstrate the many facets of the various interactions between Christians, Muslims and Jews in the Middle Ages.

Aims

- To make students aware of the fact that Christianity was not the sole religion of medieval Western Europe and to introduce students to the many facets of interactions between Christianity, Judaism and Islam.
- To introduce students to important topics in a formative period in the development of the Western Church
- To teach students to distinguish between the institutions of the medieval Church and its teachings, as well as to distinguish between learned theology of the elite and religious expression of the laity.
- To introduce students to an exciting period of intellectual growth and to study its impact on the doctrinal and institutional developments of the Church.
- To be introduced to the work of a number of major Christian, Jewish, and Muslim medieval thinkers.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have a sound overview of the major developments of the medieval western Church
- Understand the importance of the Middle Ages for the development of the doctrines and institutions of the Western Church
- Understand the importance of studying the interactions between Christians, Jews and Muslims to gain an understanding of the history of medieval Europe, and the attitudes of Christians towards those they described as Pagans
- Understand the importance of the medieval encounter between Christians, Jews and Muslims for subsequent attitudes in Christianity, Judaism and Islam concerning the religious self in relationship to the religious other.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

The paper requires an understanding of the late-medieval Church, the work and thought of the leading reformers – particularly Luther, Zwingli, and Calvin – together with the radicals, and the impact of the Reformation on European society in areas ranging from visual culture to gender relations to humanist scholarship. Students will also be introduced to varieties of renewal and reaction in the Roman Catholic Church, and to the religious changes in England from the Henrician reforms to the reign of Charles I and the civil wars in his kingdoms.

Aims

• To gain an integrated view of the historical and doctrinal developments which led to ruptures in the Western Latin Church.
• To sample the full range of the period which extended from the last decades of the undivided Western Church through to the wars in Europe in the early seventeenth century,
• To appreciate the extent to which these wars were related to religious conflict.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

• Have a clear understanding of why the Western Latin Church proved vulnerable to calls for reform
• Be familiar with the work and thought of the leading magisterial Protestant reformers, and be able to identify what constituted radical theological alternatives
• Have been introduced to the impact of the Reformation on European society
• Be aware of the reforming movements within and responses to the Protestant separation from the Roman Catholic Church
• Have gained a sense of the slow and untidy evolution of confessional identities up to the end of the Thirty Years' War (1648). They will be able to explain how confessional tensions interacted with political interests
• Have been introduced to the course of religious change in England from the reforms and legislative acts of Henry VIII up to the downfall of Charles I, and to see how religious disputes shaped the conflicts which (temporarily) destroyed the monarchy in the Stuarts' three kingdoms. They may choose to study the English Reformation in greater or lesser depth, in balance with the wider European picture.

Delivery

16 lectures; 8 tutorials

Two lecture series spanning two terms are core to this paper: The Reformation in Europe and The English Reformation.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

Candidates will be required to answer three essay questions.
Description

An analysis of the origins and development of rabbinic Judaism from the first century CE to the early modern period.

Aims

The course aims to acquaint students with the main evidence for the development of rabbinic Judaism in this period and the main factors which influenced that development.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Be aware of the nature and origin of key rabbinic texts from this period
- Be able to relate the ideas and attitudes expressed in these texts to the religious lives of Jews in these centuries.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Lectures provide an overview of the issues and evidence; tutorials require students to come to grips with key texts and problems of interpretation.

Students taking this course are strongly encouraged to have attended the lectures on ‘Formation of Rabbinic Judaism’ in Michaelmas Term before the tutorials provided for this paper.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2305 ISLAM IN THE CLASSICAL PERIOD

Description

The paper covers the historical origins and development of the theology, law and mysticism of Islam, from the seventh to the fifteenth centuries. It will consist of questions on the Prophethood of Muhammad; the Qur’an; the Hadith; Shi’ism; Islamic theology (kalam); Islamic law (shari’a); Sufism (tasawwuf); and classical Muslim authorities. Candidates should be aware of the various interpretative methods relating to Muslim Scripture, the main debates and historical controversies of the Islamic tradition, and of contemporary methodologies in philosophy of religion. References to other religious traditions may be included.

Aims

The paper aims to cover the historical origins and development of the theology, law and mysticism of Islam, from the seventh to the fifteenth centuries.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- Studied questions on the prophethood of Muhammad; the Qur’an; the Hadith; the nature of Shi’ism; Islamic theology (kalam); Islamic law (shari’a); Sufism (tasawwuf); and the relationship of Islam with other religions, in particular, Christianity.
- Had the opportunity to learn about the theologies of the Mu’tazilas, Ash’aris and Hanbalis; the Sunni law schools of the Hanafis, Malikis, Shafi’is and Hanbalis; and the major Sufi orders.
- Had the occasion to learn about the various classical Muslim authorities from among the theologians (mutakallimun), jurists (fuqaha’), Sufi masters (mutasawwuf) and Peripatetic philosophers (falasifa).
- Had an awareness of the various interpretative methods relating to Muslim Scripture, the main debates and historical controversies of the Islamic tradition, and of contemporary methodologies in philosophy of religion and comparative theology as applied to Islam.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2306 FOUNDATIONS OF BUDDHISM

Description

The paper deals with the main doctrines and practices of mainstream (pre-Mahāyāna) Buddhism, as reflected by the surviving literature of the various schools. Tutorials will enable students to further discuss and analyse the main topics dealt with during the course, thus representing an ideal complement to the lectures. It is hoped that in this way the students will be able to develop a critical perspective on the subject of the paper and the relevant scholarship.

Aims

To introduce students to the ideas of early Buddhism in a way which stimulates thought and relates to any knowledge they may already have of other religions.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have a basic knowledge of mainstream Buddhism and its doctrines.
- Have a basic knowledge of the major trends in modern scholarship on the subject.
- Have written a series of coherent essays on topics central to the subject.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2024 Version 5 – 01.06.2023

2307 HINDUISM: SOURCES AND FORMATIONS

Description

This paper offers a thematic and historical introduction to the sources and development of Hindu traditions from their early formation to the medieval period. We will explore the formation of Hindu traditions through textual sources, such as the Vedas, Upaniṣads and Bhagavad Gītā, along with the practices and social institutions that formed classical Hindu traditions. The lectures will include an introduction to Hindu philosophy. Lectures describe the history of the development of Hinduism, while tutorials follow the general historical trajectory of the lectures, focussing in more depth on specific topics.

Aims

To present the history of Classical Hinduism.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- Knowledge of the sources and development of Hinduism
- Knowledge about key classical texts
- Be able critically to assess scholarly debates about the origins and development of Hinduism.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

This paper aims to acquaint students with some of the self-understandings of Judaism that have emerged during its critical passage into the Modern world and beyond. A selection of the different theological responses that have developed in Modern Judaism will be studied focusing on the theological and practical implications for Jews and Judaism of such topics as: individual autonomy, religious authority, revelation, gender, the Holy Land, and the Shoah. By the end of the course, students should have developed the skills critically to assess the theological development of contemporary Judaism. While the tutorials require students to undertake independent research and provide an opportunity for a focused examination of the various topics under consideration, the lectures offer more of an historical overview and a chance for the study of selected primary texts, including the writings of certain prominent Jewish thinkers from the late eighteenth century onwards.

Aims

This paper aims to give students some insight into the development of Modern Judaism. It aims to demonstrate how Judaism adapted to relate to the surrounding cultures with which it came to experience increasing contact and especially how it has responded to the challenges associated with ideas linked to modernity and postmodernism. It seeks to help students to develop a conceptual understanding of the thought and practice that underpin the Jewish worldview and acquire an understanding of Judaism as the historic and evolving religious expression of the Jewish people.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Acquire an understanding of Judaism as a living religion, in a constant state of development as it responds to changing social and intellectual perspectives. Students should have become aware of the complexities of contemporary Judaism encompassing a broad range of affiliations, beliefs, and practices.
- Be aware of the theological development of Judaism from around the time of the French Revolution onwards and have attained an understanding of the different religious movements that have emerged in Modern Judaism.
- Attain an understanding of the differing theological viewpoints of some of the major religious leaders associated with the modern religious movements of Judaism, including the work of key contemporary scholars. They should also have become acquainted with and analysed the contents of major historical documents such as the Answers to Napoleon of the Jewish Assembly of Notables (1806), the rabbinic critique of nascent Reform These are the Words of the Covenant (1819), and the various Platforms of the Central Conference of American (Reform) Rabbis.
- Have considered the impact of the Shoah (Holocaust), Zionism and the creation of the State of Israel, and issues such as feminism and environmentalism on contemporary Jewish thought.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

The paper examines Islam against the background of recent history, including such topics as: Islamic reformism in the nineteenth to the twenty-first centuries; various Islamic movements including the anti-Hadith faction and Wahhabism; women and Islam; democracy and Islam; violence and war in Islam; and various modern Muslim thinkers.

Aims

The paper aims to examine Islam against the background of recent history and contemporary society, from the nineteenth century to the present day, with a particular focus on how Muslims have responded to the challenges of the modern world.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- Studied the impact of colonization on Muslim religious discourse and Islamic reformism in the nineteenth century and beyond.
- Had the opportunity to be acquainted with various modern Muslim thinkers and a range of topical debates, including the anti-Hadith controversy; the nature of Wahhabism; the ethics of war and/or jihad; the Muslim discourse on feminism; the Islamic discourse on politics, state and democracy; and the anti-Sufi trend.
- Had an awareness of the various Islamic movements in the modern world and their respective counterparts in the classical period, and the diversity of religious developments in contemporary Muslim societies.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

This paper deals with Buddhism as it developed and changed in space and time. The first part of the course will be devoted to the main doctrines and schools of Mahāyāna (Great Vehicle) Buddhism. The second part will discuss the transmission and transformation of Buddhism in some of the main areas where it continues to exist in the modern world. The tutorials will enable students to further discuss and analyse the main topics dealt with during the course, thus representing an ideal complement to the lectures. It is hoped that in this way students will be able to develop a critical perspective on the subject of the paper and the relevant scholarship.

Aims

To give students some appreciation of the various forms that Buddhism has taken during its transmission throughout Asia.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have a sense of the ways in which Buddhism has varied in space and time.
- Have a basic knowledge of Buddhism as a phenomenon in world history.
- Have a basic knowledge of the major trends in modern scholarship on the subject.
- Have written a series of coherent essays on topics central to the subject.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2024 Version 5 – 01.06.2023

2404 MODERN HINDUISM

PHILOSOPHIES AND TRADITIONS

Description
Taking up from where Classical Hinduism left off, this paper traces the development of Hinduism from the medieval period through to modernity. The course will examine Hindu scholasticism, devotional and tantric traditions, and modern Hindu thought. The lectures will explore themes of liberation, the soul and the divine, Tantra and meditation, devotional literature and the formation of modern Hindu identity.

Aims
To develop the history of Hinduism from the medieval period through to modernity.

Objectives
Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- Knowledge of how Hinduism developed after the classical period.
- Be able critically to assess the development of religious, philosophical and social ideas.
- Familiarity with key texts, schools of thought, and traditions of practice.

Delivery
8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

The lectures describe the development of scholastic, devotional and tantric Hinduism into the modern period and follow on from Paper 2307, Hinduism: Sources and Formations. The tutorials follow the general historical trajectory of the lectures, focusing in more depth on specific topics.

Assessment
Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
2405 SCIENCE AND RELIGION

Description

There is presently considerable interest in the relation of science and religion in the academy, church, and wider culture. These lectures deal with both the historical interaction of Christian theology and the natural sciences, as well as more recent debates, including some arising from the New Atheism – such as the role of evidence in determining beliefs in science and religion, and the place of science in contemporary culture, as well as issues raised for theology by cosmology, evolutionary theory, and the cognitive science of religion.

Aims

The course aims to develop a rigorous and critically informed understanding of historical debates in the field, as well as of contemporary discussions of issues of major importance, including models and narratives for relating science and religion.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have acquired a critical understanding of the different models routinely used to relate scientific knowledge and practice to religious understandings of the world.
- Be able to discuss the rise of scientific naturalism and offer a balanced account of the problems it has raised for religious belief.
- Have an understanding of major scientific developments such as Darwin’s theory of evolution by natural selection and contemporary cosmology and the questions they have raised for religious belief, as well as the impact of religion on the shaping of a scientific culture.
- Have an appreciation of the impact of philosophical issues and of historical contexts on the way in which the relationship between science and religion has been understood.

Delivery

16 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

Candidates will be required to answer three essay questions.
All BA Theology and Religion candidates will be required to submit a thesis as one of their eight papers. This option is also available to candidates for the Honour School in Philosophy and Theology and candidates for the Honour School of Theology and Oriental Studies. Joint School candidates should note that the regulations governing theses in Theology are the same as those specified for theses in the Regulations for the Honour School of Theology and Religion and summarised below. Please check the appropriate Exam Regulations, quoted below for convenience.

"... candidates will be required to submit a thesis (Paper 3000) by noon on Monday of Week 9 of Hilary Term in the final year of the Honour School as one of their eight papers. The thesis must not exceed 12,000 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography. The subject of the thesis need not fall within the areas covered by the papers listed in the Honour School of Theology and Religion. It may overlap any subject or period on which the candidate offers papers, but the candidate should not reproduce the content of his or her thesis in any answer to a question in the examination. Prior approval of the title and subject of the thesis must be obtained from the Board of the Faculty of Theology and Religion. Such approval must be sought not later than 4pm on Friday of Week 3 of Michaelmas Term in the final year of the Honour School. The request for approval should be made electronically on a form found in the course handbook which must be signed by the candidate’s tutor stating that this subject has his or her approval. The request must include an abstract of approximately 100 words addressing how the topic will be treated, and an indicative bibliography.

The Thesis should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the thesis has the same title as that previously approved by the Faculty Board, and to be his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No thesis shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University."

For comprehensive guidance relating to the Thesis, please consult the Canvas Module, Written Work submitted for Examination in the Theology and Religion Undergraduate Information Container (you will need to sign-in). This includes the current Guidance and Information relating to FHS Paper 3000.
Candidates who take this paper should normally have taken 1002 Biblical Hebrew and at least one of 2101 Narrative World of the Hebrew Bible or 2102 Poetic World of the Hebrew Bible in the first year of the Honour School.

Description

This paper consolidates and broadens the candidates’ knowledge of biblical Hebrew. They will gain further competence in the language and an ability to independently read, translate, and grammatically understand biblical Hebrew prose and verse texts, thereby furthering their reading skills and gaining an in-depth understanding of the texts’ morphological, syntactical and textual issues.

Set Texts

The list of set texts will vary from year to year. The texts selected for examination in Trinity 2024 are:

Exodus 12
1 Kings 12
Ezekiel 37
Psalms 136, 137
Ecclesiastes 3

The Hebrew text used will be from the Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia (BHS), Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 1967/77.

Aims

To increase the students’ competence in the language and ability to read the Hebrew Bible, through the study of prose and verse texts from different biblical genres.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have a good grasp of biblical Hebrew grammar, syntax, and vocabulary.
- Be able to read most of the prose sections of the Hebrew Bible, as well as some verse sections.
- Be able to translate and point the set texts from the Hebrew Bible, and to comment intelligently on points of linguistic and textual interest.
- Be able to answer questions on biblical Hebrew grammar and syntax.
- Be able to translate English prose into vocalized, biblical Hebrew.

Delivery

40 classes; 4 tutorials

Two classes per week in Michaelmas and Hilary Terms and in weeks 1-4 of Trinity Term. Tutorials offer more individualised support for learning grammar and reviewing the set texts.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

This final year paper is intended to offer students the opportunity to engage in advanced undergraduate work in Pauline studies and to apply and refine the historical, literary and theological interpretive skills they have begun to learn.

Set texts

The set texts for this paper, taught as part of the lectures and tutorials, are:

In Greek: Romans 5-8; 1 Corinthians 5-7; Ephesians 1-3.

In English: Romans 5-11; 1 Corinthians 1-7, 15 and Ephesians.

Examiners will set gobbets selected from these chapters only. The English translation of the Bible used in examinations will be the New Revised Standard Version. The Greek text used will be from the Novum Testamentum Graece (Nestle-Aland), 28th Edition; Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart, 2012.

Aims

To enable students to obtain a sound grasp of Paul’s life and letters, a detailed knowledge of Pauline theology with special reference to Romans, 1 Corinthians and Ephesians, and to have a broader understanding of the theological, ethical, literary and historical problems raised by studying the Pauline corpus in the New Testament.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- An awareness of the distinctive features of selected Pauline epistles.
- An ability to comment on selected texts in translation and also, optionally, in the original Greek.
- Acquired knowledge about the relation of the set texts with other biblical texts, particularly the other writings of the Pauline corpus (including Hebrews) and Acts, as well as some understanding of Pauline theology and of the theology of the other writings in the Pauline corpus.
- A basic knowledge of the historical contexts of the set texts in Judaism and early Christianity, and of the social setting, organisation and ethical practices of the Pauline communities.
- A basic knowledge of their contribution to later Christian theology.

Delivery

8 lectures (each of 90 minutes); 8 tutorials

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

The examination will require candidates to answer two essay questions and to comment on the set texts in English and/or Greek.
3104 GENDER AND POWER IN BIBLICAL TEXTS

Course Description

This paper will treat issues of gender and power in the biblical world, considering a variety of perspectives including historical, literary, theological, and ideological approaches. We will engage with close reading of a selection of biblical and extra-biblical texts including narrative, law, and poetry. Alongside close reading, we will employ and develop theoretical approaches to ancient texts such as cultural anthropology, gender theory, archaeology, and the comparative method. We will explore the intersections of gender, power, sexuality, race, ethnicity, and social class in the ancient world, as well as considering and developing the conceptual tools to engage in contemporary debates concerning these issues.

Aims

Students will have gained familiarity with biblical texts concerning issues of gender and power in their social and cultural contexts, considering how biblical women and other marginalized figures operated within as well as challenged the expectations placed upon them.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- Gained detailed knowledge about and understanding of the presentation of gender and women in ancient biblical texts and traditions;
- Developed the conceptual tools to approach women and other figures that appear in the margins of biblical traditions;
- Reflected upon the current state of Old Testament and cognate scholarship and future possibilities for research;
- Be able to write intelligently on the selected texts and topics in dialogue with both primary material and scholars.

Course delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Assessment for this paper will be by one three-hour written examination in the Trinity Term of the final year of the Honour School.
WHY THE ENVIRONMENT, WOMEN, COLONIALIZATION, AND BLACK LIVES
MATTER TO NEW TESTAMENT INTERPRETATION

There are no specified prerequisites for this course, although to have taken 2103 The Gospels and/or to be taking 3102 Paul and Pauline Tradition would be advantageous.

Description

Biblical scholar Elizabeth Schüssler Fiorenza writes that biblical texts should be marked with, ‘Caution, could be dangerous to your health and survival’ (Rhetoric and Ethic, 14). Scholar Krister Stendahl offered the stark warning that ‘the last racists in this country, if there ever be an end to such, will be the ones with Bible in hand. There never has been an evil cause in the world that has not become more evil if it has been possible to argue it on biblical grounds’ (‘Ancient Scripture in the Modern World’, 205). The New Testament is not simply an historical text, containing arguments for someone else in a different and ancient culture and context. Certainly it is written for particular communities at particular times and can tell us much about these places and times, but it is also true that one’s starting point or perspective has an impact on how one understands the texts of the New Testament. Whether we think it to be legitimate or not, New Testament arguments and images continue to be used to reinforce a variety of practices and standards, including those that have dominating, destructive or dehumanizing effects. This paper will invite students to reflect on interpretations of the New Testament and to think critically and carefully about how perspectives and approaches can determine our exegesis of Scripture.

This paper will introduce at least seven contemporary approaches and perspectives for interpreting the text of the New Testament: Black, womanist, feminist, postcolonial, ecological, queer, and disability studies. There are many more perspectives one could engage and the paper does not claim to be comprehensive, covering all contemporary perspectives. These seven methods, however, will offer a solid introduction to contemporary interpretation so that those who engage with this paper will become more critically reflective about what it is we do when we interpret New Testament texts. Through these methods, students will be encouraged to embrace critical and creative approaches to Scripture along with a deeper understanding of how people negotiate their contexts when reading the New Testament. By engaging these perspectives and approaches, students will develop their own critical abilities to evaluate different approaches and to examine their utility for a variety of situations. How does a difference in perspective, approach, and method affect the use and interpretation of the New Testament?

Across the 8 weeks of this paper, we will learn about particular critical approaches for New Testament interpretation - what they are, why they matter, and how they work - and then apply this approach to selected texts from the New Testament. Each week, students will be asked to read New Testament texts (ranging from the Gospels to Revelation), a set of chapters and/or articles on a particular approach to New Testament interpretation, and then apply that approach to the New Testament. Students will prepare up to three pieces of written work on which they will receive feedback and one of which could develop into their submitted essay (see Assessment below).

Aims

To achieve a rounded understanding of contemporary methods used to interpret the New Testament, with particular focus on methods emerging from marginalised populations;

To explore how ways of reading the New Testament have emerged from contemporary political, social, and cultural contexts;

To engage with some of the literature produced and key New Testament texts used by scholars immersed these various approaches to New Testament interpretation;
To develop skills in engaging critically with these methods of reading the New Testament and applying the method to their own exegesis of the New Testament.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A good knowledge of some contemporary approaches to the text of the New Testament and an awareness of key features of different methodological approaches;
- A developed awareness of the interpretative contexts in which these approaches are situated;
- Engaged with contemporary approaches in their own exegesis of New Testament texts;
- Acquired skills important for the study of Scripture generally, and for the New Testament specifically;
- Demonstrate their ability to analyse a New Testament text through one or more of these interpretative lenses.

Delivery

8 x 90-minute classes; 2 tutorials.

The tutorials will focus on preparation of the 2,500-word essay for submission (see Assessment, below).

Assessment

All candidates will be assessed by both:

(i) An essay, which should not exceed 2,500 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography, submitted no later than noon on Friday of Week 3 of Trinity Term in the final year of the Honour School. The essay will involve selecting a text from within the New Testament and examining it using one of the methods introduced in this paper, evaluating what this hermeneutical approach offers that another approach might not. Students will decide on the specific approach of their essay individually, in consultation with their tutor.

The essay should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the essay is his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No essay shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University.

(ii) A two-hour written examination in Trinity Term of the final year of the Honour School, in which candidates are expected to answer TWO questions.

The title of this paper in Examination Regulations is ‘The Afterlife of the New Testament’ – select this option when making your official examination entries.
3112 WHY IS THE OLD TESTAMENT CHRISTIAN SCRIPTURE?
HOW THE EARLY CHURCH FOUND THE GOSPEL IN THE BIBLE

Description

John’s Jesus claims to have been present to Abraham (John 8.56, 58), and Paul asserts that Jesus accompanied Israel through the wilderness (1 Cor 10.4). Since the earliest years of their movement, Jesus’ followers consistently turned to the Jewish Scriptures to find them confirming that the Messiah’s death and resurrection happened ‘according to the Scriptures’ (1 Cor 15.3-4). But what might it possibly mean to locate the gospel of Jesus in the Scriptures of Israel? This third-year paper offers students the opportunity to turn a familiar question on its head, by exploring the widespread early Christian conviction that the New Testament gospel speaks in the ‘Old Testament’. Students will study New Testament and other early Christian writers who claim to find ‘the gospel’ in Jewish Scripture – among them the Gospel of Matthew, the Gospel of John, the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, the apostle Paul, Ignatius of Antioch, the Epistle of Barnabas, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus of Lyons, and Hippolytus of Rome. In tracing nascent readings of the Old Testament as Christian Scripture, students will have an opportunity to consider these reading strategies in relation to issues such as the earliest Christian-Jewish dialogues, emerging Christian strategies for apologetics and identity formation, and debates within Christ-following communities about the importance of Law observance for Jesus’ followers.

Aims

To enable students to acquire knowledge of early Christian readings of the Bible, and to analyse and evaluate how these Jewish texts and traditions functioned as normative Scripture for early Christian readers.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will be able to demonstrate:

- knowledge of the contents and contexts of select early Christian writings from the first, second, and third centuries;
- the capacity to produce a close reading of an early Christian text’s engagement with Jewish Scripture;
- critical reflection on the reception and function of Jewish Scriptures in early Christian literature.

Delivery

8 x 90-minute classes.; 2 tutorials.

The tutorials will focus on preparation of the 2,500-word essay for submission (see Assessment, below).

Assessment

All candidates will be assessed by both:

(i) An essay, which should not exceed 2,500 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography, submitted no later than noon on Monday of Week 9 of Hilary Term in the final year of the Honour School. Students will decide the subject of the essay individually, in consultation with their subject tutor.

The essay should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the essay is his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No essay shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University.

(ii) A two-hour written examination in Trinity Term of the final year of the Honour School.

The title of this paper in Examination Regulations is ‘The Old Testament in Early Christianity’ – select this option when making your official examination entries.
Description

Does it make sense to say that God is both three and one? Or that Christ is both fully human and fully divine? How can God speak to human beings through scripture? And what’s going on in the eucharist? In the history of Christian thought, questions like these are perennial, but the intellectual resources with which we try to address them constantly evolve. For this paper, students will draw on the methods of contemporary philosophy to assess the meaning, coherence, and truth of key Christian doctrines and practices. No background in any specific method of philosophy is required, though successful student work should display careful, structured, logical reasoning and transparent arguments, as well as careful attention to the development of doctrine and the resources of the Christian tradition.

Aims

To enable students, many of whom will not have had prior exposure to Christian philosophical theology, to reflect critically on main areas of Christian theology using some concepts and techniques of contemporary philosophy.

Objectives

Students who have studied for this paper will have:

- Have some detailed knowledge of main Christian doctrines.
- Have some detailed knowledge of some of the specified texts.
- Be able to reflect philosophically on the coherence and plausibility (or not) of major Christian doctrines.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

Past papers on OXAM are titled ‘Analytic Philosophy and Christian Theology’.
Description

This course is designed to introduce students to some of the ethical traditions of religions other than Christianity, with a particular focus on the ethical teachings of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism, covering their key concepts, histories, major figures and classic texts, and to the comparison of these traditions amongst each other, as well as with other traditions of religious ethics.

The course aims to cover a great deal of systematic and historical material, as well as to introduce candidates to the comparative analysis of distinct ethical traditions.

Aims

The aim of the Comparative Religious Ethics paper is to introduce students to the ethical traditions of religions other than Christianity, with a particular focus on the ethical teachings of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism, to the comparison of these traditions amongst each other, and to their comparison with other traditions of religious ethics.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will demonstrate understanding of:

- Principal concepts, major thinkers of the ethical traditions of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism
- How to situate and analyse key source texts of the ethical traditions of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism in their historical context
- The internal variety of the ethical traditions of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism, how to relate concepts and theories of these traditions to each other and to other ethical traditions
- The relation of the ethical traditions of Hinduism, Buddhism, and Confucianism to major schools of Western moral philosophy

Delivery

8 lectures; 4 classes; 4 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.
Description

The life and thought of the African bishop, St. Augustine of Hippo (354-430), stand at a watershed in the history of Western culture, between the world of the Roman empire and the world of Christian Europe, and have been a significant influence on the latter ever since. It is almost impossible to get away from Augustine in Western tradition, whether one wants to or not! He is one of the giants on whose shoulders we all, as theologians, sit.

Augustine’s long life, prolific output and endless longing for the truth mean that his works are encyclopaedic. Focussing closely on selected texts this paper will examine the main features of Augustine’s theological reflection in historical, philosophical, social, cultural and religious context, through the lens of his own account of his conversion and his exegetical, homiletic, pastoral teaching and practice.

Set Texts

Aims

To develop skills in detailed study of the texts of a major theologian in their historical and intellectual context.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have acquired understanding of selected texts of their chosen theologian and, where appropriate, the relation of those texts to their historical and cultural circumstances.
- Have developed skills in detailed analysis of theological texts, and in articulating their doctrinal and methodological features.
- Be aware of the inter-relation of doctrinal and historical study.

Delivery

8 x 90-minute classes.

Students will produce a minimum of three pieces of written work on which they receive formal feedback.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

Candidates are expected to answer three questions, of which one will require comment on passages selected from the set texts that were studied in the classes.
Søren Kierkegaard (1813–1855) has been variously characterized as ‘the melancholy Dane’, ‘father of existentialism’, ‘the great anti-Hegelian’, ‘precursor to the theology of crisis’, and ‘prophet of postmodernism’, among many other things. He preferred to characterize himself as ‘a Christian poet and thinker’. Such catchphrases, however, merely gesture to dimensions of a searching philosophical and theological legacy that addresses an entire range of important topics, many of which remain salient in our own time. Kierkegaard’s sustained reflections on the deeper implications of Christianity’s central doctrinal claims stand today as some of the most penetrating in the theological tradition, and his thinking surfaces regularly in discussions concerning the relationship between faith and reason. Yet beyond such considerations, Kierkegaard also insisted that Christianity cannot be fully understood through its creeds and doctrines, but that faith is a response to an ‘existence communication’ enacted more in a way of life than in institutional affiliation, and this too remains relevant in an increasingly secular age. This paper addresses these matters and more, situating Kierkegaard’s writings both in their own context and in their history of reception, to enable a critical understanding of their potential significance for the contemporary era.

- Fear and Trembling – 27–53
- The Concept of Anxiety – 155–162
- Concluding Unscientific Postscript – 189–224
- Two Ages – 68–96
- Works of Love – 5–16
- The Sickness Unto Death – 15–21
- Practice in Christianity – 23–66

Aims

To develop skills in detailed study of the texts of a major religious thinker in their historical and intellectual context.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have acquired understanding of selected texts of Kierkegaard, and the relation of those texts to their historical and cultural circumstances.
- Have developed skills in detailed analysis of theological texts, and in articulating their doctrinal and methodological features.
- Be aware of the inter-relation of theological, philosophical, and historical study.

3222 LIBERATION THEOLOGY AND ITS LEGACY

There are no specified prerequisites for this course, although to have taken 2204 Key Themes in Systematic Theology would be advantageous.

Description

Further Studies in Systematic Theology and Ethics will enable students to undertake in-depth study of a number of Classic theologians, theological movements or current doctrinal debates. The papers will be text based and offerings for theologians, theological movements or doctrinal debates will change from year to year. Classes will focus on the critical examination of these texts. Students should already have encountered the theologians or the theological issues in their second year courses and lectures in ‘Key themes in Systematic Theology’, as well as lectures on Ecclesiastical History, will provide further background.

In the wake of Gutierrez’s ground-breaking work not only have there been other Latin American liberation theologies and theological responses to the political and economic circumstances in other parts of the globe (such as South Africa), the concept of ‘liberation’ has been extended to cover issues such as gender, race, sexual orientation and physical impairment theologically. Liberation theology has then fostered a number of other radical theologies while some of its fundamental and structuring concepts have received much critical attention. This paper critically examines early liberation theology, the radical theologies it inspired and the critique and response to critique that arisen subsequently.

Aims

- To enable students to specialise in a key theological developments or debates
- To extend student’s theological knowledge in a particular area of theological study
- To develop a student’s textual knowledge of a specific theologian, theological movement or doctrinal debate
- To develop a student’s skills in identifying and critically assessing a particular theological position

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- An in-depth critical appreciation of a particular theologian, theological movement or doctrinal debate
- A detailed knowledge of the key texts in the study of a particular theologian, theological movement or doctrinal debate
- A detailed appreciation of the cultural, historical and doctrinal context of a particular theologian, theological movement or doctrinal debate

Delivery

8 x 90-minute classes.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School.

Candidates are expected to answer three questions.
Christianity is regarded as one of the three great monotheistic faiths. In contrast, however, both to Judaism and to Islam, it teaches (in its traditional form) not only that there is a single God, but that this God is identical with three subjects – the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit – and that one of these subjects, the Son, became identical with the man Jesus of Nazareth. which cannot be understood without some study of the theological reflection and teaching which led to the expression of Christian faith in two of most important ecumenical documents of Christendom, the Niceno-Constantinopolitan Creed of 381 and the Chalcedonian Definition of 451. The first is the foundation of all subsequent Trinitarian thinking, the second of all subsequent Christological reflection.

The period stretching from the council of Nicaea (325) to the council of Chalcedon (451) was also a decisive one for reflection on questions surrounding the nature and working of Divine Grace, which proved to be the focus of debates on human nature, the Fall and free will in the context of the Pelagian controversy in the West.

As well as looking at the development of conciliar theology, this paper will enable students to get to grips with the works of those theologians - Orthodox, as well as those judged heretical - who were most instrumental in debating these fundamental aspects of the Christian faith: Athanasius, the Cappadocian Fathers, Cyril and Augustine of Hippo, will therefore be studied along with Arius, Eunomius, Apollinaris, Theodore of Mopsuestia, Nestorius and Pelagius. The paper will also introduce students to the historical, philosophical, social and cultural contexts which influenced these writers. In particular, early Christian reflection on the Trinity, Christology and Grace will be examined against the background of fourth/fifth century Christian life and devotion, with attention being given to Christian asceticism (including female religious life); Christian worship, devotion and art; Christian exegesis and preaching.

Aims

• To furnish students with an outline history of the chief developments in Christian thinking in the age of the first Christian Emperors;
• To promote reflection on the contexts in which Christian thinking, debate and creedal formulations emerged
• To promote knowledge and understanding of the presuppositions and practices which continue to inform much theological debate and speculation.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

• Have acquired a familiarity with the conciliar formulations of the period and the writings of the major theologians;
• Have acquired an understanding of the grounds for theological reflection and the methods of debate in late antiquity;
• Be able to reflect on the relation of theological reflection on the Trinity, Christology and Grace to Christian life and hope, both in antiquity and in the modern era.

3303 FAITH, REASON, AND RELIGION FROM THE ENLIGHTENMENT TO THE ROMANTIC AGE

Description

Both on the Continent and in Britain, European Christianity at the dawning of the eighteenth century inherited a history of long and bitter theological controversy that had not infrequently spilled over into ‘wars of religion’. Against this backdrop, the advent of the Enlightenment is often recounted as a story of ‘science and secularism’, without attending to the fuller historical dynamics in which many of the leading intellectual figures wrestled mightily with questions about how best to understand the relationship between faith, reason, and social identity in the context of a plurality of traditions within Christianity. From thinkers such as Locke, we inherit the proposal that the requirements of biblical Christianity are simple and few, and that a reasonable understanding of faith promises tolerant agreement among all Christians, and therefore a basis for peace and social stability. Although popular in some circles, such proposals were far from universally persuasive, and by the end of the eighteenth century successive critiques of the supernaturalist doctrines of Christianity – by both ‘cultured despisers’ and earnest Christians alike – had so undermined the reasonableness of Christianity that some such as Schleiermacher maintained Christian faith was to be defended through appeals neither to special revelation nor to rationality, but rather to a distinctive form of religious self-consciousness. The questions arising from these various alternatives continue to animate critical discourse on religion and society even today, and this paper enables an understanding of a number of the key intellectual transformations that have proved pivotal not solely for Christianity, but for modern history generally. Candidates will approach the topic through primary texts of historically significant thinkers.

Aims

- To enable an understanding of the key intellectual developments in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries that have proved significant both for the history of Christianity and more generally for modern society;
- To analyse and evaluate the relative merits and deficiencies of arguments regarding the relationship between faith, reason, and religious self-consciousness of the representative authors;
- To become familiar with the reception history of such arguments through engagement with substantive secondary resources;
- To build on the student’s knowledge of theology and the history of Christianity.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A good knowledge of some of the most influential and representative texts and thinkers of the period
- The ability to contextualize representative texts and thinkers with respect to the larger religious, social, and political movements of the period;
- Skills important for the historical study of religion generally, and for the history of Christianity and historical theology specifically, by assessing different sorts of historical materials and by analysing the broader context of the period;
- The capacity to think theologically, holding in view classic texts from the tradition.

Delivery

8 classes x 90 minutes; 4 tutorials

Tutorials for supervision of the submitted essays should be completed by the end of Hilary Term.
Assessment

Is by two long essays by noon on Monday of week 1 of Trinity term in the final year of the Honour School.

Essays should not exceed 5,000 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography.

The first of these essays is chosen from a list of prescribed titles; the subject of the second is chosen by the student in consultation with his or her tutor.

Prior approval of the title of that essay must be obtained from the Board of the Faculty of Theology and Religion. Such approval must be sought not later than 4 pm. On Friday of Week 4 of Hilary Term of the final year. The request should be made electronically on a form found in the course handbook which must be signed by the candidate’s tutor stating that this subject has his or her approval. The request must include an abstract of approximately 100 words addressing how the topic will be treated, and an indicative bibliography.

Each essay should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the essay has the same title as that previously approved by the Faculty Board, and to be his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No extended essay shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University.

This course examines the earliest centuries of the formation of Judaism in the Graeco-Roman Period.

The course considers the creative and innovative expressions of Judaism across a variety of linguistic and cultural registers. Attention is paid to precursors of rabbinic Judaism during the Hellenistic period as well as subsequent developments in Late Antiquity. Focus is paid to primary texts in translation from the Land of Israel (Jerusalem, Qumran and sites such as Masada and Wadi Murabba‘at) as well as texts from diaspora centres such as Alexandria and Rome. The goal of the course is to understand the broad, integrated and variegated forms of Judaism that preceded the emergence of the rabbinic movement. Set texts will be drawn from English translations of significant writings in Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek.

Prerequisites

This paper does not require the study of any other paper.

There are no formal prerequisites for this paper, although students who take paper may benefit from having taken Preliminary Examination paper Introduction to the Study of the Bible.

Aims

- To acquaint students with the primary evidence for the transformative, creative and innovative dimensions of Judaism in the Graeco-Roman period

- To develop a broad knowledge of the textual and material evidence for Jewish religion and culture in this period.

- To foster a hermeneutic, historical, and literary understanding of the various expressions of Judaism in this period.
Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will have:

- A good knowledge of the development of Judaism in the Graeco-Roman period, and the textual and material evidence for this.

- Critical skills to analyse the primary texts in English translation and the history of secondary scholarship on this period.

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Assessment

Is by one three-hour written examination in Trinity term of the final year of the Honour School or Postgraduate Diploma.

Candidates should answer three essay questions.
Description

This paper examines the main classical and contemporary approaches to the study of religion, and the emergence of Religious Studies as an academic discipline. Candidates will be introduced to major theorists from the field, and are required to engage critically in examining the comparative study of religions, the relations between religious belief and religious practice, and the central roles of phenomena myth, symbol, and ritual in theoretical discussions of religion over the course of the 20th century. Tutorials aim to enable students to engage with theories covered in lectures.

Aims

The aim of this course is to enable students to take an informed view of the place of religion in the modern world, through engaging with primary theoretical texts.

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- Have acquired a good knowledge of the main classical studies in the field of the Study of Religions in the 20th century.
- Be aware in a general and accurate way of both the main attempts to define religion and the problems of defining it. They should also understand the difference between defining religion as a universal phenomenon and locating religions in particular cultural contexts.
- Be aware of a number of major debates in the field of religious studies, e.g. the outsider/insider problem, religious pluralism, the construction of identity, gender issues, religious violence, phenomenology, post-colonialism, and the benefits and limits of comparison.
- Be enabled to make critical use of these theoretical discussions in their study of different religions.

Delivery

Extended essays should not exceed 10,000 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography. Prior approval of the subject of the extended essay must be obtained from the Chair of the Study of Religion Subject Group, acting on behalf of the Undergraduate Studies Committee. Such approval must be sought not later than 4 pm on Friday of Week 7 of Michaelmas Term in the final year of the Honour School. The request for approval should be made electronically on a form provided by the Faculty Office which must be signed by the candidate’s tutor stating that this subject has his or her approval. The request must include an abstract of approximately 100 words addressing how the topic will be treated, and an indicative bibliography.

The extended essay should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the extended essay has the same title as that previously approved by the Faculty Board, and to be his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No extended essay shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University.
3405 MYSTICISM

Description

Candidates will study theoretical issues relating to the definition and interpretation of mysticism as well as important examples of mystical literature and traditions. The paper will be examined by two extended essays. One essay, chosen from a list of prescribed titles, will address theoretical issues; the other will relate to a special topic.

Aims

To encourage reflection on the concepts of mysticism, spirituality and religious experience

To acquaint students with cardinal texts in one or more mystical traditions

To promote inquiry into the relation between mystical thought and historical context

Objectives

Students who successfully complete this paper will:

- be able to offer a reasonable working definition of mysticism and to explain why such definitions are contested
- be acquainted with the writings of significant figures on one or two mystical traditions
- be well informed regarding the evolution of at least one such tradition and of the historical circumstances which conditioned or accompanied the production of major texts in the tradition(s).

Delivery

8 lectures; 8 tutorials.

Some of the tutorials will focus on supervision of the essays to be submitted for assessment.

Assessment

Is by two long essays to be submitted by noon on Monday of week 1 of Trinity term in the final year of the Honour School.

Essays should not exceed 5,000 words, inclusive of notes and appendices but excluding bibliography.

The first of these essays is chosen from a list of prescribed titles, which will be published at the beginning of Michaelmas Term in the final year of the Honour School.

The subject of the second is chosen by the student in consultation with his or her tutor. Prior approval of the title of that essay must be obtained from the Board of the Faculty of Theology and Religion. Such approval must be sought not later than 4 pm. On Friday of Week 4 of Hilary Term of the final year. The request should be made electronically on a form found in the course handbook which must be signed by the candidate’s tutor stating that this subject has his or her approval. The request must include an abstract of approximately 100 words addressing how the topic will be treated, and an indicative bibliography.

Each essay should be uploaded to the University approved online assessment platform. Each submission will require the candidate to make a declaration indicating that the extended essay has the same title as that previously approved by the Faculty Board, and to be his or her own work, and that it has not already been submitted (wholly or substantially) for an Honour School other than one involving Theology and Religion, or another degree of this University, or a degree of any other institution. No extended essay shall be ineligible for examination because it has been or is being submitted for any prize of this University.
Paper 107, Philosophy of Religion is available to students of Theology and Religion – please check your Examination Regulations. It is delivered by the Philosophy Faculty and details are available on their website.
A NOTE ON PROGRESSION BETWEEN PAPERS IN THE FIRST AND SECOND YEAR OF THE FINAL HONOUR SCHOOL

Some papers in the second year of the Final Honour School can usefully build on the content of papers in the first year of the Final Honour School. In other words, students studying certain specialised final year papers may benefit from having already studied relevant material in the first year of FHS. There are, however, no formal prerequisites for the study of any final year paper. With a few exceptions, it is not strictly necessary to study any paper alongside or before any other; you may indicate a preference for any final year paper, regardless of what you have already studied. Nevertheless, tutors have made recommendations of which papers might normally have been studied by students embarking on a final year paper and which papers might cover relevant or related material. This information is included at the top of each course description, below the paper title. These recommendations are summarised below but you should always consult your college and subject tutors before making a final decision.

LIST OF PAPERS UNAVAILABLE FOR EXAMINATION IN 2024

The normal expectation is that all 2### papers will be available for examination in 2024.

For clarity and convenience, a list of those 3### papers which will not be available for examination in 2024 will be provided when the Schedule of Papers is reissued in HT23. This list may be added to following the analysis of selections made by students in HT23.

RECOMMENDED PATTERNS OF TEACHING

This grid indicates the pattern of teaching recommended by the Faculty for each paper. It represents in tabular form the information already included in the individual paper descriptions above. This pattern is not prescriptive and, as you will see, allows considerable flexibility but it is intended to help students and tutors plan students’ workload. All details are subject to change.

If you have any issues with teaching or supervision please raise these as soon as possible so that they can be addressed promptly. Contact details are provided in your course handbook.
