If you have NOT yet participated in the mandatory Introduction to Research Ethics (CUREC) online training session, you must do it this term: Wednesday 20th of May, 2-3pm. You must sign up for it ahead of time; booking opens 23 April. This is required of all research students at the University of Oxford. Spots fill quickly so sign up soon. Here is the link for the CUREC training sign-up: <https://www.socsci.ox.ac.uk/event/introduction-to-research-ethics-at-oxford>

PLEASE email me (address below) to confirm that you have participated. If you did this last term or last year, you do not need to repeat it, though I do encourage you to do the other Research Ethics modules on their website if you are doing empirical research.

See here for the new online CUREC application process via Worktribe (portal has moved onto Sharepoint recently): <https://unioxfordnexus.sharepoint.com/sites/OxIntranet-research-innovation/SitePages/ethics-worktribe.aspx>

We plan to have a final lunch together for all MTh/PGDip students and families (broadly construed) on the Friday of 8th week, though we may move it earlier to accommodate those leaving early for ordination. A survey and more details to come.
